

Tom “Burbree” Ely

Producer / Protools Engineer

Known to his friends as “TomTools” because of his expertise on Protools, Tom “Burbree” Ely started working in the studio at the tender age of 13. After building a studio at school with the last of the ILEA budget he soon sought every opportunity he could get; programming, playing keyboards and assisting engineers at Islington council funded projects like Pluto and IMW.

After building and installing Protools rigs at SCV and a stint at Steinberg, Tom joined a remix outfit with some friends called Ignorants. With Tom on board he helped Trevor Henry, Antony Marshall and Leroy Williams grow from an unknown remix outfit to a world-renowned production company. Producing the first single and a further 5 cuts from Craig David’s platinum selling sophomore album “Slicker than your average” and working with the likes of Steve Fitzmaurice and Mark Francs along the way.

Tom now writes, produces and mixes full time for a variety of urban and Hip-hop artists. “Jump” a single he recently produced for boy group Fun*dmental 03 reached number 1 in MTV Base’s Chart for 9 weeks.

Whilst production is now his first love, Tom regularly “rescues” fast paced sessions that need a creative ProTools engineer that understands music both sonically and structurally.
